The Mother

The Mother

We are constantly learning Watching the world around us Playing and molding it to our needs We are constantly growing Eating fruits and vegetables Or our fellow creatures We refuse to be ignored Our cries and prayers rise to the heavens To ask for what we need or want We consider ourselves independent That we are advanced people And we are in need of noone

Yet Mother Nature is there She is the one to give us mysteries and toys to learn She is the one to give us food to grow strong She is the one who listens to our cries and prayers Then tries to fulfill them as best she can She watches as we push her away As we cause her pain and then joy She watches as we believe ourselves to be grown In need of her no longer Yet in her eyes We are and always will be children And she will always be The Mother

The Unstoppable Journey

It flows from rock to rock It winds from hill to hill It laps from bank to bank Its journey never ending, never ceasing

It crashes from shore to shore It plunges from great heights to rocks below It seeps from the unbreakable mountains Its journey never ending, never ceasing

It falls from clouds in the blue It inspires from nature a revival It brings from its essence our survival Its journey never ending, never ceasing

Doing the Dream

Flying through the air Swimming through the ocean Skiing through the snow Doing your dreams

Climbing up the mountain Scaling the tallest cliffs Falling from a waterfall Doing your dreams

Traveling the world Seeing the 7 wonders Sharing in other cultures Doing your dreams

Bring peace to the world Uniting all nations Stop hunger Doing your dreams

Shining in your window is sunlight Beeping on your stand is the alarm You wake up to start another day To do your dreams

To fly through the air To swim the oceans To ski through the snow To climb a mountain To scale a cliff To shower in a waterfall To travel the world To see the 7 Wonders To share in other cultures To bring peace To unite nations To stop hunger

To live your life to its fullest To make all your dreams come true
